Course description	The course "Change Management" aims to provide students with both fundamental and practical knowledge about the process of change within organizations. Throughout this course, students will learn about key concepts of organizational change, the reasons for change, resistance to change, the role of leadership and communication in managing change, as well as strategies and models for successfully implementing change. The course combines contemporary theory with case study analysis and practical exercises, helping students develop the skills needed to identify the need for change, manage resistance, and lead transformative processes in various organizational environments.
Course objectives	The course content includes contrasts to the predominant notions of change in organizations as a response to changing environments led and implemented by top management by introducing theories, models, and concepts on new and innovative forms of organizing for change. Change in organizational contexts is further elaborated regarding the crucial role of leadership and culture in creating change-oriented organizations. The students experience of both change and organizations form the basis for a reflective and critical discussion around multiple approaches to change in organizations.
Expected learning outcomes	After successfully completing the module, the student should be able to: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Acquire basic knowledge of change management in enterprises; (ECTS 0.5), 2. Understand the importance of positive change in supporting positive business performance; (ECTS 0.5), 3.
